

Emily A. Leithauser

WRITER, DESIGNER
AND PHOTOGRAPHER

Elegance

Any journalist must first and foremost be a skilled communicator. I adore and respect the power of words and images for both the producer and the audience. I can handle any situation with grace and diplomacy, whether it is with a disgruntled consumer or an enthusiastic supporter. My maturity gives me taste and wisdom beyond my years. I can easily put others' needs and desires above my own.

Energy

With enthusiasm and determination, I believe every day is another chance for adventure and challenge. I thrive in environments where I can multitask and race against a deadline. The quality of my work increases when I can work on multiple projects in one day, jumping from one to another as inspiration strikes. My energy empowers team members, and their contributions invigorate me.

Expression

I am happiest when my creativity is flowing, whether it is through words, design or photography. A beautifully constructed sentence and a breathtaking photo both excite me. I challenge myself to present information in an innovative way. There is always a new or bigger audience to reach. A problem is simply a new opportunity to think outside of the box.

Expertise

Through my previous work, I have learned how to market church programs, target new donors for a 501(c)(3) organization, produce print publications for an academic environment and create content for a national magazine. I understand the media from all perspectives: public relations, advertising, print and broadcast. I also have learned how to write across platforms.
